Abstract

For a long time, researchers doing biology in a chemistry lab, or those doing chemistry in a biology lab, or doing both simultaneously, did not have a journal dedicated to supporting their kind of science, the one done at the interface of chemistry and biology. All of this changed when Chemistry & Biology was launched in 1994 as the first journal to focus on publishing work done in all areas at the interface of chemistry and biology and on promoting the new way of thinking about biology that started to emerge from these efforts.
