

The extended TILAR approach: a novel tool for dynamic modeling of the transcription factor network regulating the adaption to in vitro cultivation of murine hepatocytes.

Vlaic S, Schmidt-Heck W, Matz-Soja M, Marbach E, Linde J, Meyer-Baese A, Zellmer S, Guthke R, Gebhardt R (2012) The extended TILAR approach: a novel tool for dynamic modeling of the transcription factor network regulating the adaption to in vitro cultivation of murine hepatocytes. BMC Syst Biol 6, 147.

Details

Abstract

Network inference is an important tool to reveal the underlying interactions of biological systems. In the liver, a complex system of transcription factors is active to distribute signals and induce the cellular response following extracellular stimuli. Plenty of information is available about single transcription factors important for the different functions of the liver, but little is known about their causal relations to each other.

Involved units

Microbiome Dynamics Gianni Panagiotou Read more

Leibniz-HKI-Authors

Reinhard Guthke

Details

Jörg Linde

Details

Wolfgang Schmidt-Heck

Details

Sebastian Vlaic

Details

Topics

Networks of host- fungal pathogen interaction

Virtual Liver

Identifier

doi: 10.1186/1752-0509-6-147

PMID: 23190768