

Medicinal natural products

Natural products represent an eminent source of therapeutics, in particular for antibiotics and antiproliferative agents, many of which are in clinical use. Using modern analytical methods we elucidate the structures of novel natural products from bacteria and fungi, and their bioactivity profiles are evaluated using a variety of assays. Structural diversity is increased by synthetic chemistry and biosynthetic approaches.

