

Microbial interactions as source of new antiinfective compounds

The research group Miqwi is integrated into the structural unit Evolution of Microbial Interactions. The group deals with the application-oriented projects to identify, isolate and characterise novel natural products from the secondary metabolism of amoebae-microbe-interactions.